SUMMARY

Broadcasts on industrial activities are diffuse in character but considerable attention is focused on the continuing shortage of building materials for civilian construction. The production of other consumer goods, notably footwear and clothing, is still admittedly unsatisfactory and lagging behind most other industrial activities. This is borne out also by some of the Statistical Bureaus reports for the second quarter of this year. PRAVDA reminds industrial management, in this connection, that plan-fulfillment figures, however favorable, are not necessarily indicative of excellent performance. It frequently happens that the "overall" plan is completed and even exceeded while its itemized specifications--in regard to assortment, quality and so forth--are not complied with.

In the field of ideology, attention is called to the citadel of Western Ukrainian culture, the Lvov University and its various institutes, which are said to be too slow in absorbing the streamlined history of that part of the country and its reunion with Soviet Ukraine. PRAVDA UKRAINY is officially berated for relaxing its ideological vigilance, particularly in matters of "nationalist perversions." Moscow's watchful eye on the life of its national minorities is felt also in the references to discrimination against Kazakh girl students, inferior lecturing propaganda in Tatar ASSR and the ideologically faltering cinema industry of Georgian SSR.
